Scheduled Friendly Cup opposition Brightwell, clearly fazed by the Isis form of late, failed to raise a team, so Oxford United CC threw their hats in the ring, though disappointed us by not in fact being the local heroic football team recently promoted, thus meaning the Isis players had to put away their autograph books. The administrators of the Cherwell league clearly did not want a team of such potential in their ranks, their skipper telling me that they were refused entry until they found a ground to play at to call home (such a minor detail!). A captain's observations:

- A warm welcome to newest member Josh Lamb, surely it's only a matter of time until he bats like Allan (Lamb, not Easty, his granddad!). Suffered the dubious and rare fate of being run out on debut.
- James Duckitt's breakthrough season gathers pace, showing what a capable all-rounder he is becoming by volunteering to be kit custodian after the game. Far more important than scoring runs and taking wickets.
- A week when Joe did his best to ruin his promising early season batting average, and also discovered that it's good to go for 10 an over because it keeps the opposition happy.
- Nick trying his best to go through the entire season not getting out, and also discovering what most of the rest of us bowlers already know, that is what it feels like being tonked (at least it was only for one over)! Isis fielders doing their best to facilitate the above tonking.
- Roy never seeming to want to bowl a full spell even when he deserves one.
- Seamus getting through the game without getting injured
- Abi actually remembering that he is in the team for this game, though failing to realise that Harry Stoneman is not telepathic. Next time he will call.
- Alf, with an impressive emulation of Freddie Flintoff, smashing the ball so hard that he broke his bat clean in half. Clearly worth it for a single.
- Harry becoming an early nomination for duck award by insisting that Alf's broken bat is repairable.
- Easty for the second time in a week showing the captain he definitely deserves to open the batting
- Jakey proving he can be the Adam Gilchrist of Isis, scoring wicketkeeper runs at number 7

Opposition 200 and plenty played Isis not quite 200 and fewer. Move on
